Research Interests

Topics: Democratic representation and policy congruence; public opinion; state politics and institutions; reproductive health policy and access; survey methods and public-opinion estimation.

Current Research: Developing a continuous, directional measure of policy–opinion congruence to examine when and why state abortion policies align with or depart from public preferences. Related projects use longitudinal survey and state-policy data to estimate state-level abortion opinion and evaluate how policy environments, partisan institutions, and sociodemographic factors shape public attitudes and representation.
